

PH.D. COURSE WORK IN WESTERN HISTORY

PROGRAMME OBJECTIVE

The Programme Objective of Course Work in Ph.D. in Western History is to provide an opportunity of research in a variety of topics : Indians Abroad, Aspects relating to Colonisation and Freedom Struggle (like the Princely states), Foreign Policy of India, History and Environment etc.

PROGRAMME SPECIFIC OBJECTIVE

The programme of Ph.D. in Western History has been designed in a manner to provide a better understanding of various concepts of historiography. This will enable a scholar to interpret the facts of history appropriately and present them in a most modern manner. The future research scholars are also initiated in their respective fields of specialisation to help them to understand the proper background of their topic of research. They are also acquainted with the recent trends in their fields.

PAPER I RESEARCH METHODOLOGY

Course Objective: After the completion of this course the scholar would acquire knowledge in the recent development and trends in historiography which will be helpful not only in the preparation of a synopsis but also in the writing of a Ph.D. Thesis.

PAPER II SELECTED RESEARCH AREA

Course Objective: After the completion of this course the scholars will be acquainted in various modern themes related to their fields of research. This will help them to chose their topic of research carefully and excel in their specific area of research.

